The screenshot shows an email newsletter from The University of Vermont. It features two main sections: "Sustainable Development for Public Health in Rural Uganda" and "Traditional Mongolian Medicine". Each section includes a map or photo, a brief description of the course, and details about dates, costs, and registration. The newsletter also includes a call to action for an information session on Wednesday, March 2 at 4:30pm in Rowell 107. The footer contains the university logos and a small "emma" logo.

Sustainable Development for Public Health in Rural Uganda
June 2016 - HLTH 211 (3 credits)
Join Dr. Sarah Adams on a three-week trip to Haruhu, Uganda to learn about health issues affecting sub-Saharan Africans and ways to help build a healthier, more economically and environmentally sustainable future. Tourism is not a major source of income in this area, so agriculture, small business development and other sources for the improved well-being of communities in the rural District will be explored through hands-on service-learning.
● COST: $2952 + airfare and discounted summer tuition
DATES: Approx. June 2016, actual dates TBA
REGISTRATION: Apply by April 15, 2016. Undergraduate and Graduate Students must have a minimum 2.5 GPA and faculty approval required. Limit: 10 students.

Traditional Mongolian Medicine
June 2016 - HLTH 211 (3 credits)
Travel with Professor Kathleen Scudlaff to learn about and practice traditional health beliefs and practices in Mongolia. This trip is both educational and exciting - you will learn about culture and heritage, and have a wonderful time!
● COST: $3090 + airfare and discounted summer tuition
DATES: July 2016, actual dates TBA
REGISTRATION: Apply by April 15, 2016. Undergraduate and Graduate Students must have a minimum 2.5 GPA and faculty approval required. Limit: 10 students.

Learn more information at an information session:
